T. Pottle is superintendent of the carpenter work and J. G. Aborn foreman; E. E. Vosecott painter; J. J. Riley of Bangor slater; J. N. V. Lane of Bangor does the electrical work, and Stickney & Wiggins the furnace and plumbing work.

The morning opened cold and squally. As the day wore on the temperature rose and the wind fell, and the roughest water was found off Turtle Head. The route was from Belfast to Northport Camp Ground, thence to Turtle Head and Cape Cod, thence to Eggemoggin Reach to Green's Landing, where a stop was made for dinner and a dance. A longer stop was made at Green's Landing than first intended and the return trip was made by Mark Island light and the Cape Cod Canal, and then by the Cape Cod thoroughfare. The party arrived home about 6 o'clock, all well pleased. The Belfast Band was on board and furnished excellent music.

Col. Shepherd, of the New York Mail and Express, established a cure early a year ago and now it has a firm place among the institutions of that city. During treatment the business man is not kept from his friends and he can attend to his business regularly. There are no sore arms from the injections. The treatment is harmless and the patient finds improved health. It has brought joy to hundreds of ones. It brings hope to the inebriate, and to him it has one great merit—it cures.
